International virtual Conference on December 1st, 2021 (Languages: English, German, Russian)

Background

The global impact of the COVID-19 pandemic on international efforts to end AIDS cannot just yet be measured. Around the world, we are observing impacts on programs to fight HIV, tuberculosis, malaria and other diseases, on civil societies and on key populations – with great regional differences. Human rights, solidarity and the financing of global health are in trail.

The outcome of the federal elections in Germany will set a new course. For the global HIV work, this holds the opportunity to get the goal of ending AIDS by 2030 back on track. We still don't know whether the new federal government will follow in the footsteps left by the previous government under Chancellor Merkel when it comes to global health. Will the new government breathe life into Germany's role as a "Global Health Champion"? Will it continue the commitment of the previous federal government? With the milestones of the replenishment of the Global Fund and as host of the G7 Summit in 2022 there will be drawn a line to the position of the future German government.

With our conference, we want to initiate a dialogue and, above all, give the voice to international civil society: We will discuss how Germany can embrace the attribution as Global Health Champion, which experiences we can transfer from our history of HIV to SARS-CoV-19 and which preliminary conclusions can be drawn. Peter Sands, Executive Director of the Global Fund, and Winnie Byanyima, Executive Director of UNAIDS, have agreed to participate in the event.

In addition to experts from international civil society and groups particularly affected by HIV, TB and malaria, politicians from the democratic parties represented in the Bundestag, scientists and experts from the Global Fund, WHO and UNAIDS are invited.

The conference is organized by Action against AIDS Germany in cooperation with AIDS Action Europe, Deutsche Aidshilfe and the Global Fund Advocates Network Asia-Pacific (GFAN AP).

Program

"Global Health Champion Germany?! From HIV to SARS-CoV-2 – What have we (not) learned?"

Wednesday, 1st of December 2021

Opening panel

10:00-11:30 CET

Admission and technical "housekeeping rules" (admission from 9:30 CET)

Welcome

Welcome address by the inviting organizations represented by Sylvia Urban, Board member of the German Aids Federation and Action against AIDS Germany

Key Notes

Speaker: Peter Sands, Executive Director of the Global Fund

Speaker: Winnie Byanyima, Executive Director of UNAIDS

Speaker: Cindy Kelemi, Executive Director at Botswana Network on Ethics, Law and HIV/AIDS

In their key notes, the speakers will give an update on the impact of the COVID-19 pandemic, caused by SARS-CoV-2, on ending AIDS, TB and malaria and insert the issues of the conference.

The subsequent discussion will focus on the following questions:

- What are the main differences being a Global Health Champions nowadays compared to the situation 20 years ago?
- What experiences can be transferred from our history with HIV to SARS-CoV-2?
- How do we achieve the health-related Sustainable Development Goals (SDG3) and the goal of ending AIDS by 2030, also with regard to the situation arising from SARS-CoV-2?
- What changes result from SARS-CoV-2 and how can we ensure that the basic principles of the Global Fund and UNAIDS with its mechanisms to ensure the participation of key populations based on human rights principles are strengthened instead of weakened?

BREAK: 12:55 – 13:20

Session II "Global health architecture is changing - Where are the champions?"

13:20 – 14:35 CET

The current pandemic is changing the global health architecture, its interaction, direction and funding. The discussion on the establishment of further funding mechanisms for pandemic prevention and preparedness is taking place without including the already existing underfunded institutions with their existing experience in fighting pandemics and developing standards. In regard of the changes, the course must be set in the right direction. The global health security paradigm threatens solidarity and human rights. For civil society, the main issue is to preserve proven principles: the experience of shrinking spaces for civil society participation are very real! The session will illustrate current developments, furthermore we will discuss which challenges need to be accomplished in the future and which experiences can be used to achieve the sustainable development goals by 2030. The way must be paved for Global Health Champions to realize a world without AIDS, tuberculosis and malaria and to enable health for people worldwide. To make this happen, Germany must not only maintain its support for the Global Fund, UNAIDS and WHO, but expand it – to strengthen human rights and global solidarity.

The following questions arise in this context:

- In view of the observed changes, how can already existing structures and principles be strengthened and adapted?
- How can the German government contribute to strengthen multilateral cooperation and civil society participation?
- What lessons can be learned from the current pandemic and applied from the history with HIV?
- What is the role of existing intuitions (WHO, UNAIDS, GFATM, Gavi etc.) in pandemic prevention?
- What are the expectations of international civil society towards Germany in the face of changing structures and what steps are needed to fill the role of Global Health Champion?

BREAK: 14:35 - 14:45

Session III "Investing in a world without AIDS, tuberculosis and malaria – what are the right arguments?"

14:45 - 16:00 CET

Access to health care is a human right. Despite tremendous progress achieved over the last two decades, diseases such as AIDS, TB and malaria still kill millions of people every year. Populations in low-income countries, the poorest, most vulnerable, and marginalized face a disproportionate risk that has been further exacerbated by COVID-19. Further investments in global health are required to get back on track and achieve a world without AIDS, tuberculosis, and malaria as we fight new pandemics. The internationally agreed Sustainable Development Goals, and specifically SDG 3, will only be attained by reaching a common understanding of global solidarity and social justice. As we face the devastating impact of COVID-19, partners from all sectors need to rally around common values to achieve our common goals. We need to be ambitious if we aim at ending the three diseases as epidemics by 2030.

In this session we will discuss with representatives from government, parliament, civil society, and multilateral agencies what are the financial needs to achieve a world without AIDS, tuberculosis and malaria and present our thoughts on a fair share for Germany

The following questions arise in this context:

- What are the current needs to end AIDS, tuberculosis, and malaria by 2030 and what would be the cost of inaction?
- Why are the Global Fund and UNAIDS key to achieving SDG3 and what key principles and added value do they bring in a changing global health landscape?
- What are the expectations from the German Civil Society and its fair share analysis?
